Marshmallows

The first Marshmallows ever made in the United States were made in Atlanta by Mr. Frank E. Block. He did everything he could to sell them to dealers over Georgia, but they "bought their candies in New York." So Mr. Block sold his marshmallows to New Yorkers at 23 cents a pound, and the Atlanta people bought them in Atlanta stores at 75 cents per pound.

the state farm could be made to yield enough beef, and more, for the population of the small-state city that is comprised in the sanitarium. It is possible that turning to beef as a political concession, the result might actually be a practically less than that usually returned by the farm. But the negative loss sustained in this connection would be more than compensated by the state-wide stimulus given to the industry destined eventually to compete with cotton. Books could be kept on the enterprise and bulletins issued from time to time would report progress and show farmers who to follow the example of the commission which pitfalls to avoid and what courses to follow.

The peculiar circumstances of the case—the contract let by the state, the free access at the state farm, make a unique opportunity. It would mark an epoch in Georgia, if, at the expiration of the year, not only had this entire contract been filled with Georgia beef, but if the state itself had set to its farmers an example in "living at home."

An added incentive in the commission is the rapid dividing of cattle raising in the northwest and west. Papers from these sections report that not in years has the volume been so small. They attribute it, universally, to the fact that the feeding season is only six out of twelve months, which runs count up out of all reason. In Georgia the feeding season is ten and ten and a half months out of twelve, and the soil offers every crop for cattle sustenance.

The state has a great plant near Milledgeville for farm demonstration purposes. It would be highly fitting if there the state should elaborate for its farmers the profit in this splendid industry.

THE ARTISAN AS WELL

A well-known firm of local contractors recently published in The Constitution a striking advertisement in behalf of the artisan of the city. The advertisement recited that the newspapers had been filled with columns in behalf of the farmer, and that many public meetings had been held looking to that assistance, but that for the artisan, a minimum of encouragement for construction in the building trades in the cities, a class of workers who needed assistance even more emphatically than the farmers. The best way to render this aid, the advertisement stated, was to contract now for the building and repairs under contemplation on a waiting schedule. In that way the artisan would be helped and the builder also, since it is doubtful if building material will touch the present low levels again for many months.

There is sound wisdom and business sense in the position taken by these advertisers. They only reiterate what The Constitution has been preaching for the past two months, and that, that the present one of the rarest of opportunities for construction works of a public and private nature. The building material market is, at every point, more reasonable than it has been in years. Labor of every class, skilled and unskilled, is to be had in abundance, and in a great many cases actually needs employment. As the advertiser stated, the farmer living back on the soil manages somehow to scrape through the winter! But to the man out of the city in the cities the prospect is an entirely different one.

The Constitution would like to see an epidemic of building and of repairs and extension start in Atlanta. Confessedly, a great many property owners have definite plans, but have been holding off for what they assume a more favorable season. There is never likely to be a more favorable season. Building is now an excellent investment. It will also give employment to many deserving men, thus distributing money throughout the city.

The boy Prince of Wales to the front. Will probably capture an interesting snapshot at the war.

Carranza has bought an airship. Probably thinks it safer to rise above the situation.

The city's educational plan is cluttered with red tape, friction, worm, insubstantial and inadequate provision.

The limit of "stretching" to accommodate more children has been reached.

Unless a remedy is provided before September hundreds of children will be thrown back upon the homes and into the streets. Council will find, in 1915, its first duty in safeguarding the public health.

The next issue, the paramount constructive issue, of 1913 will be the schools!

It is well that we approach the new year with that understanding!

AN EXPERIMENT IN BEEF.

There ought to be deep significance in the announcement, recently published in The Constitution, that to a firm local to Milledgeville has been awarded the fiscal year's contract for supplying beef to the state sanitarium, located at that place. The price per pound is noted at $30, and it is stated that so rapid has been the progress of cattle-raising in Baldwin and surrounding counties that the contractors hope to supply all their contract from local sources. The dimensions of the contract is shown in the fact that it will average 1,500 pounds of beef a day.

This announcement comes in close conjunction with the statement that on the state farm next year cotton will be radically reduced and feedstuff made to take its place. The state and the prison commission could make no better investment than to raise not one acre of cotton in 1915, but to devote the acre, the labor and the time to a broad scale demonstration of the feasibility of raising beef cattle in Georgia on a comparatively large scale.

For instance, with proper management
